Sharing Stories of Success from the Secure Rural Schools Program

Project Title	Sharing Stories of Success from the Secure Rural Schools Program
Project Summary	Report on the success of Title II projects in rural communities due to funding from the Secure Rural Schools program. Little information about the impacts of these projects is reportedthus it is important to highlight what the SRS program has accomplished, and why projects were/are needed.
Country	United States

Project Description

The Secure Rural Schools program, authorized by congress, gives a portion of forest-generated profits back to rural communities that are extensively bordered by national forests and relied on timber sales in the past. Title II funds of SRS go back into national forest improvements—and there has been a lack of information surrounding the impacts of these projects. Blog posts, and perhaps other means of reporting, i.e. social media, will be used to narrate stories of these projects. Community members, DFOs, and coordinators will be contacted for their opinions on the impacts of the projects, and perhaps for photos of what was done. The blog will be run personally, but certain posts may be featured elsewhere depending on the relevance of the post to the Office of Communications publication—Inside the Forest Service.
